Visiting different places around the world is a great experience. Travelling is not only entertaining, but it is also an educational experience. You can learn a bit of history from every place you visit, or you can learn about the economy of the city, state or country there is unlimited information to discover everywhere you go. For example, which products are being produced? Or what kind of touristic services are being offered by the city? Wherever you decide to go, make sure to go beyond the touristic experience. Try to visit place that are not intended to be visited by tourists, or try to do what a local person would do, that of course if you want to live a real experience and make your stay more memorable. It is always interesting to know where our everyday objects are being manufactured. Did you know that most of Donald Trump's clothing line is being made or assembled in Mexico? At least at the moment, Yes!

Believe it or not, the man who claims to hate Mexico also uses it to manufacture his products. These products are being sold in the USA at very high prices. Did you know that 85% of the avocado that is being consumed by Americans is imported from Mexico? The famous Guacamole is being prepared with 100% Mexican products yet again at least at the moment. Even in countries where the production of a product is not evident, have something to offer. For example, Norway produces petroleum. New Zealand's landscapes are being preserved and offered to attract film companies. Spain is the country where many retail clothing stores are created, have you heard about Zara, Oysho, Desigual, Bershka, etc. Well all of them belong to a Spanish business person who happens to be one of the richest men in the world. Sometimes countries only make parts of a product, and the rest is put together in another country. For example, many parts of cars are being manufactured in Mexico. In many American states, these parts are made of metal and then assembled in Brazil or the USA. Going on holiday is an educational experience too. Pay attention to everything you see because you never know when and where you will be able to learn something that might help you have very interesting conversations in the future.
