

Final Report

Case: Sandra Molina

Date: September 29

Dear Mrs. Molina,

The previous days you hired a private service of investigation to check on Marcelo Fernandez, your husband. You suspected he was having an affair with his best friend Valeria.

The type of proofs we got were: pictures taken at different hours and days, recordings of different conversations between Mr. Marcelo and his friends or colleagues, interviews with people who know him, searching of different expenses he had made, among others.

After several days of searching, and analyzing of the different proofs, we've come to the conclusion that:

Mr. Marcelo is probably behaving the way you have noticed because apparently he's been under lots of stress in different contexts of his life. Some of his colleagues asked him if he wanted to quit his job.

Mr. Marcelo is facing a high demand of products at work. His partners there are not helping much so much of his work gets stuck. Mr. Marcelo's boss requires much advises and constant help which seems to be pretty stressful.

At the gym Mr. Marcelo usually has his earphones on, that keeps him concentrated in the exercise and he barely talks to someone there, only once he asked a personal trainer if he could try to do a more relaxing routine because he was very anxious. He stays at the gym for two or three hours, depending if you will have time to have lunch with him or not.

The days Mr. Marcelo doesn't have lunch with you, he basically meets with Miss. Valeria at the cafeteria where they have a quick meal and talk about their days at the office or at home. She even asked him if he needed some help. As I could see, they indeed have a close relationship as friends.

Mr. Marcelo then comes back to the office and tries to finish as much as possible before leaving. Once it is time to leave, we've noticed he's been going to different stores where he walks around apparently looking for a present. The type of products he sees are mainly for women (but I have noticed he went to check on this pair of tennis shoes for man, I really think he wishes he had, he has asked how much the tennis shoes cost several times).

He never buys anything really, and seems to be worried and thoughtful while he takes this walks.

After all of this he goes home to wait for you.

Every day is basically the same. There are no findings of any affair.

It was simple to know that his strange behavior comes from two things happening simultaneously:

1. He, Valeria and apparently some members of your family are preparing a surprise for you (I know the surprise, but I won't tell you because I don't want to ruin it). That's why he's been hanging out with his friend much and also the reason why he does not want you to know anything.

2. He is worried you are the one cheating on him.

In one of our recordings, he mentioned you'd been acting different, and he saw my name and address written on a note inside your purse, he talked about this to Valeria and from his point of view it seems you are the one cheating! He asked Miss Valeria if she thought you were cheating.

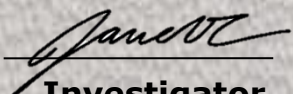

Mrs. Sandra I believe there is a huge misunderstanding between you and your husband. You both love each other but seem to have lost the way to communicate better.

I strongly suggest you talk to him immediately to let him know your concerns and then he may let you know his.

By the way, he and Miss. Valeria are planning to come to see me (and find out why you had my address). You'd better hurry and talk to him.

Thanks for your trust.

Note. All the recordings, pictures and material gathered from this case will be given to you at the hour and place you consider appropriate.
